One speech addressing both topics

INTRODUCTION TO THE COMMITTEE

Confidential Project is an experimental committee inspired by the film Spiderhead, and the series The X Files. This committee places the delegates in the position of global representatives of a confidential organization that implements certain projects to control and solve anomalies and unnatural conflicts. This commission is conformed by member states all around the world, as a secret organization whose existence is only known by the governments of each of the countries that form part of it, it's imperative that the anonymity of its self remains intact, and that civilians and outer nations that don't make part of Confidential Project don't discover the existence of this organization. In other words, this commission functions as a secret service. It is crucial to take into account that since the committee is a creation that arises from fictional problems, the information is modified and created from a fictional ideal. The information found in the guide is a mixture of the events that occurred during the movie, hence, there's invented information about the reach that both of the topics have on society. Although this commission functions under the idea of fictional movies and series, the problem that addresses is an exaggeration of conflicts regarding illicit substances and the anomaly of the existence of aliens and outer forces.

TOPIC A: SPIDERHEAD

HISTORICAL CONTEXT:

The storyline takes place in the Spiderhead Penitentiary and Research Center whose location is unknown with the exception of the government. Hence, it's a particular prison built on an island in which inmates have the opportunity to live comfortably yet in a lock-up strike center. However, there are conditions for inmates to be part of this center, some of which involve accepting the testing of their bodies with various drugs and setting them up as test subjects. Every inmate has a device on their back called the MobiPak, in which drugs are stored so that later on they can be injected into the body. Steve Abnesti being the one in charge and also the owner of Abnesti Pharmaceuticals is in control of the dose as regards the substance each inmate receives. Meaning that the intellectual and fiscal part of this project is been done by the same Steve. Steve by the hand of Mark, his assistant.

Enrolls in a set of research with different drugs that have the potential of intensifying human emotions and disturbing their behavior in dangerous ways. Steve constantly claims that carrying out the tests is for the good of humanity. However, it starts becoming apparent that the testing of the drugs is for one simple reason and that is taking them to the market and creating massive businesses since they can be a potential weapon used by the government itself.

CAUSES

Although there are no explicit reasons within the film for the constant desire for experimentation and the creation of dangerous and manipulative substances. Steve does manage to mention that the research is done for innovative purposes and the achievement of good human behavior. However, as the main issue unfolds, Steve begins to show his true intentions and reasonings, some of which involve major causes leading to atmospheric issues such as

Political Power

The first drug on display tested is G-46 named Laffodil, it has the capacity to provoke uncontrollable laughter and realizing endorphins. B-15 named Verbaluce is a drug used on subjects whenever needed to speak clearly with a vast vocabulary, forcing anyone who takes it to speak and express themselves imbued with a vast vocabulary. N-40 is one of the strongest drugs since it has the ability to manipulate emotions by enhancing the feelings of love within a person and only letting them see the beauty in what's in front of them. I-16: Darkenflozz is meant to be an agitator of sorts and is one of the most dangerous substances since it creates an unimaginable feeling of anxiety, fear, unease, and discomfort causing the body to start hyperventilating and lose control of itself. I-27: Phobica as its name implies is capable of making a person afraid of even the smallest things. All of the drugs Abnesti manipulates are drugs capable of completely taking control over someone's emotions these taken on a political basis can be very dangerous, for Steve it might be an economic gain however for governments around the world it will not only be innovation but a way of gaining control of population and extending their national power around the world through smart power.

Socio-economic

Since this is a legal center, the drugs will eventually be launched into the marketplace and will eventually provide massive income to Abnesti pharmaceuticals; this substance will be disposable only to the most powerful people and governments since they are such strong drugs. These drugs show extreme advancement when it comes to substances and mind control. Although it might not be used in medical areas it can certainly be used with other purposes of control, this will produce a high profit for the company in charge as will also turn the company into one of the most famous and most powerful ones with the capability and advances to create substances achieving mind control through emotions.

Health

The development of these drugs can also be acknowledged as a discovery as a process of identifying chemical entities along with the recognition of new and prosperous molecular that can be used as a treatment for disease and potential resources to therapeutic agents, these substances are created and have been produced to keep further control to human emotions and also gather further understanding on how emotions directly affect actions. These psychoactive drugs can unfold how emotion works and its scientific explanation from a biological and physiological extent

REPERCUSSIONS

Although the research center is completely legal, many actions and experiments in there can be highly questioned because of their lack of ethnic and moral values, most of regarding human rights, privacy, and well-being

Inmate's behavior and well-being

Individuals are never forced into a drug they have to say “acknowledge” for a substance to enter their system. However, because this one main objective is to control emotions, they have big repercussions on the inmate's behavior. The long-term effects of many drugs aren't put to test. This produces a lot of questions about the methods used by Steve when testing a drug and leaves a blurry perspective on the psychological and physical effects such substances can leave on individuals after being subjected to them. Later on in the film, a big disruption among inmates is the bathroom, since it has been left with traces of defecation and the person who's been living in it hasn't been found. Although they never mention a reason for the person living there, it certainly is an inappropriate behavior possibly left by the use of certain drugs.

Human rights trespass

Throughout the trials, inmates accept the testing of drugs in their bodies, however, they are never given specifications on what substances are being given and thus implications. While being tested they are placed in a transparent room where they are watched, they hear Steve's voice but windows are tinted from the inside, and are never able to see who is watching them. One of the most important pieces is seen when Jeff is asked to give I-16: Darkenflozz to Heather, they are forcing Jeff to administer a dangerous and deadly substance to her. Steve does force Jeff through manipulation and can end up supplying Heather with I-16 which causes a massive sense of anxiety in her, producing her to kick herself in the back damaging her MobiPack causing the I-16 substance to flood her whole body in it. She ends up committing suicide from despair. Thus we can see how an individual died and there was no follow-up protocol nor clear information to the individual on what drugs she was acknowledging to take, in fact, can be taken as a complete trespass of basic Human Rights declared in the universal declaration of Human Rights as well as the rights of prisoners.

Drug epidemic

It is critical to remember that these drugs have the potential to cause any form of addiction. Because they can play with and manipulate emotions, it is extremely possible that when they reach the public eye and enter public markets all over the world, they will produce an epidemic, similar to what has already occurred with highly addictive medicines such as antidepressants and opioids. In general, nearly a million individuals have died in the United States from drug overdoses since 2000. This is the next concern that will arise if this sort of medicine is used. What you want to know about these chemicals is how accurate they are with emotions and how they effect each and every individual and the environment. What you notice about these substances is how exactly they are with emotions and how they influence each and every individual, and the intake isn't unpleasant; in fact, these sorts of chemicals are simpler to administer and offer.

CURRENT SITUATION

After testing more than half of the drugs disposed of from Abnesti pharmaceuticals, one of the last ones is B-6, a unique drug with the ability of control and making the consumer completely obedient. Such a drug was being tested throughout the film by Steve Abnesti, its own creator. He is in the process of putting B6 through its final test: Is it strong enough to make you hurt someone that you love?. In order to find answers Steve submits Jeff with B-6 and later on brings his girlfriend Lizzy in the test room, then he orders Jeff to inject her with the dread Darkenfloxx. Jeff answers no, indicating that B6 isn't as powerful as Steve had imagined. Jeff then resolves to finally stop his boss, and the two struggle, causing Steve's medication box to burst and overwhelm him with a mixture of his own devious concoctions. Meanwhile, Jeff saves Lizzy and the two flee the institution, but not before Steve instructs the rest of the detainees, who are unwittingly jacked up on B6, to stop the pair from fleeing. However, the two escape just in time and race back to the mainland on a boat. To avoid being apprehended by the cops, Steve flees the island in his plane, but the Darkenfloxx forces him to crash into the side of a rocky mountain before he can escape. The police end up arriving at the institution, with the recent escape of two inmates (Jeff and Lizzy) and the crash of Steve's plane. The actions taken in the prison are unknown however it is evident how the main drugs are still linked to inmates since they still have a MobiPack in their back, it is now a further question what will happen within the institution and the drugs.

Abnesti Pharmaceuticals

Being such a powerful company with the capacity of creating new and innovative substances with the ability of emotional control, Abnesti is constantly thriving and rising. It can for sure gain international power since the market and government will have big dependence on them and their production. Regardless of their potential, they could also be questioned because of their moral ethics when creating drugs and testing them on individuals and could mean an opening investigation from a world court arguing their lack of respect towards human rights

IMPACT TOWARDS DEVELOPMENT

Substance misuse and drug usage are ongoing problems in society and lack of government control is a growing and imminent problem. Since B6 has the potential to be a new weapon employed by governments and global powers against civilians, it is clear from observation and analysis how profound and significant a shift it will bring for global markets, governments, and the whole international community. Due to this, it is crucial to assess both the use of these drugs and their kind. Trying to keep things going in the best way possible to aid with global and economic growth while keeping each nation's jurisdiction and human rights in mind.

The idea of a drug that takes over the control of human actions is a frightening concept. The spread of such a drug would undoubtedly have a significant impact on the world, affecting individuals, communities, and entire societies. In this essay, we will explore how the spread of such a drug could affect the world.

Firstly, the spread of a drug that takes over the control of human actions would have a profound effect on individuals. Those who take the drug would lose their ability to make their own decisions, and their actions would be entirely controlled by the drug. This could lead to individuals engaging in dangerous and harmful behaviors that they would never have otherwise done. For example, if the drug caused individuals to become violent, there could be an increase in homicides and other violent crimes. This could cause significant harm to the individuals themselves, as well as to those around them.

Secondly, the spread of such a drug could affect communities. If the drug were to become widespread, it could cause entire communities to become violent and chaotic. This could lead to an increase in crime, making it difficult for law enforcement to maintain order. The drug could also lead to the breakdown of social norms and values, causing individuals to behave in ways that are considered unacceptable in their communities. This could lead to social unrest and further exacerbate the negative effects of the drug.

Thirdly, the spread of a drug that takes over the control of human actions could have a significant impact on society as a whole. If the drug were to become widespread, it could lead to a breakdown in social order, making it difficult for governments to maintain control. This could lead to the collapse of society, as individuals would be unable to cooperate and work together for the greater good. The drug could also significantly impact the economy, as individuals would be unable to work and contribute to society in a meaningful way.

Fourthly, the spread of such a drug could have long-lasting effects on future generations. If individuals who take the drug cannot make their own decisions, they may be unable to raise their children in a healthy and nurturing environment. This could lead to a generation of individuals who cannot make their own decisions and who are controlled by external factors. This could have a significant impact on the development of future societies, making it difficult for them to function and thrive.

ORIENTATION AND OBJECTIVE OF THE COMMITTEE

The Confidential Project is a committee focused on introducing powerful chemicals into society; delegates will be required to examine the power and ultimate application of drugs uncovered in spider heads. We strongly encourage delegates to consider the social, cultural, and governmental implications of medicines like the B6 in a social and criminal context.

Given that this committee is based on a film and the topics are based on it, delegates must have significant knowledge of the film, the events that occur, the reasons and ramifications for their delegation as well as the others. present in the committee so that the delegate may function better

Although the themes attempt to resolve issues surrounding the film's content, it is intended that the delegates will not focus just on resolving these issues affecting the film, but rather will be able to extrapolate these themes and apply them to real-world circumstances.

Delegates are also expected to be informed on the qualities of each substance and how their own delegation agrees on their implementation in society. It is essential to understand what basis they propose and in which domains they agree on the implementation of such pharmaceuticals.

Although delegates can focus on all drugs and their own implementation, we strongly advise them to concentrate on the criminal, political and social implications the substance will have when been implemented rather than the situation shown on the prison. Finally, we also encourage delegates to explore not only the substances that are presented in the film but any other that is psychotic and can be found in our real-life panorama. Last but not least, its highly recommended for the delegates to see the movie spiders head to to understand how the drugs work. The movie is at Netflix.

GUIDING QUESTIONS

1. Is your delegation in favor of the use and transportation of psychotic substances?
2. Should ethical values be taken into account when creating new drugs with the capacity for emotional manipulation?
3. Is your delegation in favor of launching all drugs into the public market?
- 4 How does your position adapt to the jurisdiction of your delegation?
5. What actions has your delegation taken towards psychotic substances?
6. Is your delegation in favor of the use of substances such as B-6 in civilian people?

TOPIC B: THE X FILES

INTRODUCTION TO THE TOPIC

The X-Files is a science fiction television series that aired from 1993 to 2002. It follows two FBI agents, Fox Mulder and Dana Scully, as they investigate cases that involve paranormal phenomena, extraterrestrial life, and government conspiracies. The show was known for its "monster of the week" episodes as well as its overarching mythology that explored the government's involvement with aliens and their ongoing cover-up of their existence. Even though X-Files is a television show, the topic is based on real-life situations of extraterrestrial life appearances. The name of the commission is inspired by the show and the problem, due to the relationship it has to the present conflicts that will be discussed during the committee, but none of the cases presented at the guide are cases from the series, they are all created cases for the commission.

Without more preamble, since the year 2000 humanity has experienced a closer look towards extraterrestrial life, and many theories have been raised to confirm the existence of these outer earth living things. This topic will be centered on created conflicts and situations that happened for paranormal reasons. It's important to notice that these events haven't taken place in real life, they are a creation for the commission to have better dynamics and a wider context of themes to be debated.

It is important to note that there is no credible evidence linking Area 51 to the existence of extraterrestrial life. However, Area 51 has been the subject of numerous conspiracy theories and rumors related to extraterrestrial life, and these theories have captured the imagination of many people around the world.

One of the main reasons that Area 51 has been linked to extraterrestrial life is its history of secrecy and government cover-ups. The facility was established in the 1950s as a testing and development site for the U.S. government's top-secret U-2 spy plane. The government went to great lengths to keep the existence of the U-2 and its operations at Area 51 secret, even going so far as to deny the existence of the plane after it was spotted by commercial airline pilots.

This culture of secrecy and cover-up has led many people to believe that the government is hiding something even more significant than the development of advanced aircraft. Some conspiracy theorists believe that the government is using Area 51 to study extraterrestrial technology and even to store captured alien spacecraft.

Another factor that has contributed to the link between Area 51 and extraterrestrial life is the numerous sightings of unidentified flying objects (UFOs) in the area. The desert surrounding Area 51 is a popular spot for UFO enthusiasts and amateur astronomers, and there have been many reports of strange lights and objects in the sky in the vicinity of the facility.

Some UFO enthusiasts and conspiracy theorists believe that these sightings are evidence of extraterrestrial spacecraft visiting the Earth and that the government is covering up the existence of these crafts. They suggest that the government may be using Area 51 to study these crafts and to reverse engineer their technology.

Despite the lack of credible evidence linking Area 51 to extraterrestrial life, the facility has become a cultural icon and a symbol of government secrecy and cover-up. The many conspiracy theories and rumors surrounding the facility have inspired countless books, movies, and TV shows, and have captured the imagination of people around the world.

In recent years, the U.S. government has begun to acknowledge the existence of Area 51 and to declassify some information about its operations. In 2013, the CIA released a previously classified document acknowledging the existence of Area 51 and the role it played in the development of the U-2 spy plane. However, the government has continued to deny any involvement in the study of extraterrestrial life.

First Conflict: March 17th 2023

On March 17th of 2023, a group of 15 people were at a camp near Area 51 in the Nevada desert. Everything seemed normal until, suddenly, a strange fog began to surround the camp, preventing the visibility of those present. As the mist lifted, the 15 individuals had disappeared without a trace.

Area 51 authorities began an extensive search of the area looking for any sign of the missing persons. During the investigation, several traces of unidentified vehicles were found in the surroundings of the camp. This, along with the strange fog and the lack of physical traces, led the investigators to conclude that something supernatural had occurred.

Later, on closer inspection of the area, a green substance was found on the ground. It was believed that it could be blood, but after several analyzes, it was determined that it did not resemble any compound known to science. This made supernatural theories of events gain more strength.

Paranormal theories suggested that the missing people were abducted by alien beings inhabiting Area 51. Some speculated that these people were specifically targeted for an unknown reason and that their disappearance was a sign that something big was about to happen. However, paranormal theories were not the only ones in circulation. Some believed that the missing people were the victims of a secret government experiment gone wrong. Others believed that they were kidnapped by a cult that practiced dark rituals in the area. Meanwhile, family members and friends of the missing persons continued to search for answers. They were devastated by the loss of their loved ones and wanted to know what had really happened.

Despite multiple investigations and the cooperation of Area 51, no theory about the disappearance of the people gained enough strength to be considered as the official explanation. The community at large was left with more questions than answers.

Over time, the disappearance of the 15 people became a local myth. It is said that those who venture into the area near the camp can hear strange sounds at night and see shadows moving among the rocks. Some say they have seen strange lights in the sky, while others claim to have seen the missing people walking in the desert.

Despite technological advances and increased investigative efforts, the disappearance of the 15 people remains an inexplicable mystery to humanity. Area 51 remains a place shrouded in secrecy, where knowledge lies behind closed doors and is only available to those with the necessary credentials.

September 26 2022

It was a quiet night in the Nevada desert when the unthinkable happened. A team of highly-skilled thieves managed to break into Area 51, one of the most heavily guarded military installations in the world, and steal a top-secret X-File. The file contained confidential information about paranormal activities that had occurred all around the world, and its theft threatened to expose the existence of extraterrestrial life and other government secrets.

The incident occurred on September 26, 2022, and the news quickly spread like wildfire. The government officials responsible for the security of Area 51 were left scrambling for answers, but they were unable to locate the stolen X-File or apprehend the culprits responsible for the theft. The situation quickly spiraled out of control as rumors began to circulate about what might be contained within the stolen document.

At first, the government tried to downplay the situation, claiming that the stolen X-File was not a matter of national security. However, as more and more people began to demand answers, it became clear that this was a serious breach of security. The X-File contained sensitive information about the existence of extraterrestrial life, paranormal activities, and other government secrets that could not be shared with the public.

As the days turned into weeks, it became clear that the X-File was in danger of being published, potentially exposing the secrets that the government had worked so hard to keep hidden. With the international community in danger and the secrecy of the information at risk, an intergovernmental organization called the Confidential Project was called in to address the problem.

The Confidential Project was a top-secret organization made up of experts from around the world who specialized in handling sensitive information. They were tasked with tracking down the stolen X-File and preventing it from falling into the wrong hands. However, despite their best efforts, the case remained unresolved.

The situation was further complicated by the fact that the X-File had been stolen by a group of skilled hackers who were determined to use the information contained within it to expose the government's secrets. They had already begun to leak small pieces of information to the press, causing panic and chaos around the world.

As the stakes grew higher, the Confidential Project was forced to take drastic measures. They brought in a team of elite agents who were trained in espionage and counterintelligence, hoping that they would be able to track down the stolen X-File and stop it from being published.

The agents were sent on a mission to infiltrate the hacker group responsible for the theft and retrieve the stolen document. It was a dangerous and risky mission, but it was the only way to prevent the secrets contained within the X-File from being exposed to the world.

For months, the agents worked tirelessly to gain the trust of the hacker group and gather information about their plans. They risked their lives every day, knowing that one false move could mean the end of their mission and the exposure of the X-File to the world.

Despite their best efforts, the case remained unresolved. The hackers were always one step ahead, and they seemed determined to expose the government's secrets no matter what the cost. It was a race against time, and the fate of the world hung in the balance.

As the months turned into years, the stolen X-File remained a mystery. The government continued to deny its existence, and the public remained in the dark about the secrets that lay within. However, rumors continued to circulate, and some people claimed to have seen strange things in the sky or encountered paranormal activity.

The case of the stolen X-File remains unsolved to this day. Some believe that it was never actually stolen and that it was all a cover-up by the government to distract from other issues. Others believe that the X-File is still out there,

January 20th 2023

In the lush green mountains of Colombia, near the city of Bucaramanga, a tragedy of unprecedented proportions struck the peaceful community in 2017. Over the course of a few days, a series of bizarre events took place, leading to the death of sixty individuals. Despite extensive investigations and intense scrutiny from the media, the case remains unsolved to this day, shrouded in mystery and speculation. Here are four possible theories that attempt to explain the events that unfolded during those fateful days.

Theory 1: Natural Disaster

Some experts believe that the deaths near Bucaramanga were caused by a natural disaster, possibly a landslide or a volcanic eruption. The region is known for its rugged terrain and volatile geology, with many active volcanoes in the area. The theory suggests that a sudden geological event may have triggered a chain reaction of events, leading to the tragic loss of life. The strange phenomena witnessed by some of the survivors, such as bright lights in the sky and eerie sounds, could be explained by the seismic activity and the release of gas and other substances.

However, this theory has been challenged by others who point out that there were no signs of seismic activity or other geological anomalies in the region around the time of the incident. Moreover, the sheer scale and intensity of the events suggest a level of complexity that goes beyond a simple natural disaster.

Theory 2: Mass Hysteria

Another theory suggests that the events were the result of mass hysteria, a phenomenon in which a group of people share a collective delusion or fear. The theory proposes that a small group of individuals, possibly suffering from anxiety or other psychological conditions, began to experience hallucinations or delusions that spread to others in the community. As more and more people became convinced of the reality of the paranormal activity, it triggered a chain reaction of panic and chaos that led to the deaths.

This theory is supported by the fact that many of the witnesses who reported seeing strange lights and other phenomena were from the same community and may have known each other. However, this theory has also been criticized for not explaining the physical evidence and the sheer number of deaths. Moreover, many of the witnesses were not prone to anxiety or other psychological conditions, making it unlikely that mass hysteria alone could explain the events.

Theory 3: Military Experiment

A more sinister theory suggests that the events were the result of a secret military experiment gone wrong. Some experts believe that the Colombian military, in collaboration with foreign agencies, was conducting a clandestine experiment involving advanced technology and possibly even extraterrestrial life. The theory proposes that the experiment went awry, leading to the deaths of sixty individuals.

This theory is supported by the fact that the Colombian military has a history of collaborating with foreign agencies and conducting secret experiments. Moreover, many witnesses reported seeing military helicopters and other equipment in the area around the time of the incident. However, this theory is also highly speculative and lacks concrete evidence to support it. Moreover, it does not explain the strange phenomena witnessed by some of the survivors.

Theory 4: Paranormal Activity

The most popular theory, and the one that has captured the imagination of the public, is that the events were the result of paranormal activity. Some experts believe that the region around Bucaramanga is a hotspot for paranormal activity, with many reported sightings of UFOs, ghosts, and other supernatural phenomena. The theory proposes that a powerful entity or force, possibly of extraterrestrial origin, was responsible for the deaths.

This theory is supported by the fact that many witnesses reported seeing bright lights in the sky and hearing strange sounds. Moreover, there are many stories and legends of supernatural activity in the region, suggesting that there may be some truth to the paranormal theory. However, this theory also lacks concrete evidence and is highly speculative.

IMPACT TOWARDS DEVELOPMENT

Governments around the world are known to keep secret information regarding various topics, such as alien activity, confidential projects, and sensitive information about their operations. While it might seem counter-intuitive to withhold information from the public, governments have their reasons for doing so. In this essay, we will explore why it is in the government's interest to maintain the secrecy of certain topics.

One of the most significant reasons for governments to maintain secrecy is national security. Governments often possess classified information that, if leaked, could pose a significant threat to national security. Information about military operations, weapons technology, and classified intelligence gathering is often kept secret to protect the nation's interests. For example, if information about a country's military strategy or the location of its military bases is made public, it could be used by its enemies to launch an attack or counter-strategy, putting the country and its citizens at risk.

Another reason governments maintain secrecy is to protect their citizens' privacy. Governments collect vast amounts of data on their citizens, from personal identification details to financial records and medical history. If this information is made public, it could lead to identity theft, financial fraud, or other crimes. Therefore, governments maintain secrecy to ensure that sensitive data is protected, and citizens can trust their government to keep their information confidential.

When it comes to sensitive topics such as alien activity or confidential projects, governments maintain secrecy for several reasons. Firstly, they might want to avoid causing panic or hysteria among the public. Suppose information is released that suggests the existence of extraterrestrial life or advanced technologies. In that case, it could lead to widespread speculation and fear, potentially causing social unrest and destabilizing the government's authority.

Secondly, governments may keep information about confidential projects secret to protect the commercial interests of their country. For example, if a government invests heavily in a specific technology or product, it may want to keep that information secret to prevent other countries from copying or replicating it, giving their country a competitive advantage in the global market.

Finally, maintaining secrecy around a confidential project can be critical to its success. If information is made public, it could lead to interference from outside parties, such as rival companies or hostile governments. By keeping the project confidential, the government can ensure that it is free to pursue its goals without external interference.

OBJECTIVE OF THE COMMISSION

The objective of the Confidential Project is to solve the cases presented. Due to the threat that it presents to the maintenance and compliance of the secret information that the files stolen present. Hence, the situation in Colombia has to be addressed since the cause of the conflict has not been found, meaning that the possibility that an outer earth force could have produced the situation. Along the topic flows, new cases are going to be presented, so all delegates have to be prepared for surprising changes during the committee, and have to be open and creative for the promotion of solutions regarding the conflicts presented.

It's important to notify that the main purpose of the commission is to remain as a secret organization, so delegations have to understand that the secrecy of the information has to be protected.

GUIDING QUESTIONS

¿What possibilities does your delegation stand, to address the conflict?

¿What possible solutions can a confidential project do?

¿What international threat does the conflict present?

¿What other possible theories are there?
